

Laser-cut style for sharp dressing

Forget the old draping curtains, dusty blinds and venetians — stylish laser-cut panels are the way to go when it comes to dressing up the windows. The new DecoGlide screens by Meriam Salama and Marianne Sourial of Melbourne design consultancy Twenty Six Letters, is a series of detailed laser cut panels that glide smoothly on a refined tracking system. Available in three different materials — timber plywood, acrylic or polyester — there are a range of colours to choose from that will suit various themes or tastes. Prices start from $96.60 per sqm.
